Opening Soon: The Redwood Sky Walk in Eureka

The new Redwood Sky Walk at the Sequoia Park Zoo in Eureka, California takes nature lovers and explorers of all ages to new heights among some of California's world-famous redwoods. The impressive $4M canopy trail, opening soon, soars more than 100 feet above the forest floor in California's oldest zoo. At a quarter mile, the Redwood Sky Walk is the longest canopy walk in the Western United States. Suspended bridges and platforms bring visitors up close and personal with in-city old-growth and mature second-growth redwoods in a completely new and very special way. Viewing the forest floor far below and the canopy soaring above (over 250 feet at the tallest point!) wows, delights, educates and inspires visitors to learn about the rich hidden ecology of the magnificent redwood forest. The experience is intentionally integrated with the zoo and complements the natural environment, current animal exhibits and nature play areas. The Redwood Sky Walk is ADA compliant with the exception of an adventure section with square open mesh decking, making a thrilling but safe experience.
